Children from the TTD Balaji Temple, Kitende, presented a Unity in Diversity skit at the Indian High Commission in Nakasero on January 26, during the celebrations marking the 77th Indian Republic Day.

The skit showcased the cultural and religious differences that existed among the population in the 18th Century, which eventually led to the colonisation of the country.

Although India attained her independence on August 15, 1947, January 26, 1950 is when India's constitution was adopted.

Much as India was colonised by Britain, its culture, traditions, and diversity were not influenced by British rule.

Those who acted as soldiers excited the audience with their craft.

Preparations before the stage ensured perfection.

Some of the elders watch how children showcase what they had practiced.
